Summary of research assignment or task

Students wereworking on two assignments irst was compring magazines and journals. Secondwas moving from a question about a topic, through preliminary research, up to creating a thesis statement for a research paper that we will be in Spring 2018 in WRT 606: College Writing II.

Student learning outcomes for the guest information literacy instruction (at least one, no more than three)

As a result of thisguest information literacy instruction undents will recognize popular magazines and cholarly journals, and will know when to use which type of periodical.

As a result of thisguest information literacy instruction undents will learn how to choose a topic, do preliminary research, and move toward forming a thesis statement for attraction.

How will you know how students are doing as they work toward meeting these outcomes?

Although students did not have time to thoroughly complete both assignments, I was able to quickly review each of their worksheets and guide them, particulatheir choice of topics.

Based on your experience teaching this session and any assessment of student work you were able to do, what can you change next time to improve how you teach it? Or, what was successful that you want to be sure to do again the next time you teach it?

I had already had the other section of Prof. L'ant RTG 105 in three library sessions with Prof. Walsh for EDUC 113: Reading Research Therefore, they werfamiliar with me and I could work from the material I had already cover and that session described in a separate report nore effective.

This section, however, had not had any library instruction in EDUC 113, so I had to spend time determining what they knew and didkhow about research. This made instruction less effective. If possible, it would be helpful to coordinate the instruction of the EDUC 113 and the WRTG 105 classes.
